

Making a Place for Community

Local Democracy in a Global Era

Gar Alperovitz, Thad Williamson and David L. Imbroscio

Praise for Making a Place for Community:

"An indispensable primer for the new century."

—From the forward by Benjamin Barber, author of Jihad v. McWorld

"Comprehensive, balanced, and well documented, Making a Place for Community is a monumental collection of valuable research, experience, data and policy guidance on building strong local economies. Essential reading for every city, county and state official and engaged citizen and an invaluable reference source to which they will return for years to come."

—David C. Korten, author of When Corporations Rule the World

"The restoration of American democracy will begin — if it begins at all — in the lives of communities, not Washington DC or state capitals. Making a Place for Community provides an illuminating and rigorous tour of the existing landscape of community life and the ongoing efforts to foster development. It is a terrific catalogue of promising ideas."

—William Greider, author of One World, Ready or Not: The Manic Logic of Global Capitalism

"A breathtaking synthesis of the latest research on the essential role of strong community economies in revitalizing American democracy. It contains hundreds of exciting examples of successful policies, businesses, and movements that demonstrate that localization IS a viable alternative to perils of globalization. Every local politicians, policymakers, and activist should read, understand, and use this book.

—Michael H. Shuman, author of Going Local: Creating Self-Reliant Communities in a Global Age

"Students interested in the intersection of social science and social policy must read this important book. The authors vision of the adverse impact of globalization, internal capital mobility, and suburban sprawl on American communities is compelling. This vision provides the basis for a new and comprehensive policy agenda to achieve community economic stability and for understanding why such stability is so important for the future of American democracy. Making a Place for Community is replete with theoretical insights, strong substantive arguments, and thoughtful policy analyses."

—William Julius Wilson, author of When Work Disappears: The World of the New Urban Poor

Gar Alperovitz, the Lionel R. Bauman Professor of Political Economy at the University of Maryland, has a leading voice in the communitarian movement for 30 years. His book, The Decision to Use the Atomic Bomb is the definitive history of the subject. He serves on the editorial board of Tikkun, and his articles appear frequently in The Nation, The Boston Review and The Washington Post.

Thad Williamson is a researcher at Harvard University. He has written for The Nation, In These Times and Monthly Review.

David L. Imbroscio is Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Louisville.
